About Us

TECHila Law is a self-funded consulting firm that combines law, technology, and human rights to drive positive change - one project at a time.

We solve problems and address complex challenges through our Research, Training and (Human Rights & Tech) advisory services.

Whether it's addressing human rights issues or tackling technological challenges, we've got you! Our combined expertise allows us to support clients in effectively solving problems and navigating the complex intersection of human rights and technology.

Emerging technologies, such as Ai, carry immense transformative potential across all sectors of business and society. However, for this transformation to be sustainable, it is crucial to uphold human rights and promote overall well-being.

By integrating human rights considerations into our solutions, we ensure that the benefits of emerging technologies are harnessed ethically, while centering the well-being of individuals and communities.

By combining our expertise in law, human rights, and emerging technologies, we strive to create a future where technological advancements and progress align with the fundamental values of human rights and ethics.

Our Vision

Our vision is to contribute to a future where the development and use of technology are in harmony with human rights, well-being, and the ecological system. Through our expertise in law, technology, and human rights, we strive to be at the forefront of shaping ethical practices, policies, and strategies that prioritise the protection of human rights in the digital age.

Our Mission

Our mission at TECHila Law is to advance human rights and well-being in a data-driven world, while promoting the responsible development and use of AI and emerging technologies.

We are dedicated to providing expert consulting services in an ever-changing world, where data-driven and algorithmic technologies play an increasingly influential role.
